Video Tutorials: Windows Mac Web Android iOS Windows Apps Android Apps PC Games Social Networking Security Books Notes Games Favorites Bookmark Tools Bookmarking Software Mobile Apps I need to import a file of bookmarks, and have been told that I could do it by using Mozilla Bookmarks. But since I am using Firefox ESR (not the regular version), it's the only option I have. I downloaded and installed the plugin, but there is no "Import Bookmarks" option. Is there another way to import a file of bookmarks? I also have to export my bookmarks to another folder, and would also like to know if there is a way to do that, without using other software. What are your favourite browser bookmarks management software? If you use multiple browsers, you could import bookmarks from other browsers into our Bookmarks App. When you import bookmarks, you don't have to select the browser you are importing from, you just select the folder you want to import the bookmarks into. After import, the bookmarks will be imported into the selected folder. When exporting, you can select the folder you are exporting to, but you don't have to

The University of Maryland's scientific research gains new momentum The University of Maryland has secured a $62 million federal grant to provide equipment for a research station at Prince William Sound in Alaska. The grant is the largest single award in the University's history. The funding covers construction of the H.H. Bowen Experimental Forest and a new wetland study site. The grant will build a seawater flume — the first of its kind on the Atlantic Coast — to measure water flow and sediment transport from Prince William Sound to the Bay. Construction of the H.H. Bowen Experimental Forest and a new wetland study site will provide a field station for UM-BIDD scientists and students. Credit: UM-BIDD "The University of Maryland is very pleased to partner with the U.S. Forest Service to fund this pioneering study on coastal ecosystems," said Dr. Rita Colwell, President and Chancellor of the University of Maryland. "The implications of this study could benefit a broad range of coastal environmental issues, including ecosystem and water quality." There are no similar flume studies at Prince William Sound, a region in southwestern Alaska famed for its wilderness areas. Measurements of water and sediment will allow scientists to understand water flow and sediment transport to the Bay — a key point for the ecological health of the Chesapeake Bay. "The H.H. Bowen Experimental Forest will be a long-term site for studying how watersheds change over time and how forests affect the water," said Dr. Colwell. "It is exciting to be part of such an important study of watershed dynamics at a site with a long history of science." UM-BIDD will be the lead scientist at the site and has a 30-year track record of research and education at the University of Maryland. 77a5ca646e
