By: Marvin Horn, International Relations Reporter/Writer South American Writer and Veteran of the Salvadoran Civil War On June 16th, former President of El Salvador, Alfredo Cristiani, was found guilty of genocide and crimes against humanity at the International Criminal Court, the first sitting former head of state to ever face this type of charge. Mr. Cristiani had previously served as head of the Salvadoran military under the infamous Salvadoran Junta, now infamous for being responsible for much of the massacres, disappearances, torture, and sometimes outright extermination of thousands of left-wing political activists. Also, rebel forces and civilians committed war crimes, including torture, rapes, murder, forced disappearances, and even extermination of entire villages. What is more, in 2000, Commander Majoob out of the government Delegation of Military Operations admitted prior to the trial that there had been up to 3,000 deaths under his command in the final stage of the civil war. In El Salvador, a Statute of Limitations of 15 years is in place in criminal law for crimes and offenses, but in principle, according to Article 70 of the UN Convention against Torture, "The party to the conflict bears primary responsibility for the consequences of any action taken in the territory it controls, subject to due process of law." This means that the activities of the former President and commanders of the Junta are in principle responsible for what is happening now in El Salvador. To this day, more than 20 years later, people have not received justice for the terrible crimes committed by the government, and indeed, the famous "dirty war" continues. At the end of the war the CIA and the Southern Cone did what they do best - they created paramilitary death squads to protect their supply lines in Nicaragua. The point is that the entire international community, so self-righteous that it now cries "human rights violation" in El Salvador, has absolutely no jurisdiction. They now use international law only for cover and specific political and economic interests.

Elden Ring

In Golden Sun, summoners who have run out of luck must return to their home village and appeal to the townspeople to collect the necessary materials to perform the few rituals that will bring them back to life. But when a stranger named Elden appears, and offers to help, the summoners may find themselves taking on new quests. The graphics are colorful and vibrant and the audio is catchy, but the plot has me scratching my head. A nightmarish underworld and a series of experiments conjured up by the Grim Reaper could be the stuff of nightmares, but the story about children being taken into the underworld by the Grim Reaper and his quest to free them seems a bit far fetched. The title world seems to be full of mythological elements, but how much truth is there to this game? I wouldn't say this game is without flaws, but the graphics were okay, the music was good and the balance between light, medium and hard levels was fine. There was never a dull moment in this title, whether you were trying to save your own life or someone else's. I found myself enjoying the game, but my summary is just a vague description of the action-RPG. If you enjoyed those types of games, then you'll probably enjoy this title. It is worth trying if you're looking for something different, but I'm not sure if I'll be going back to it. 13 12.5/20 VGMaps.com Retro Game Review To win in fantasy battles, you must have good luck and skill. To win in Dragon's Dogma, you must have a good deal of luck and skill. To use a dice attack in this game, you must have a good deal of luck and skill. Roll. Since everything in this game, aside from the loading times, is predetermined by chance, the game resembles a classic dice-roll. When you're trying to spend money, you are trying to use your skills. When you're attempting to hit the most important monsters, you are trying to roll low. If you don't have the ability to survive, you get experience points. One thing that I found amazing about this game was the fact that you don't kill your enemies, you merely kill them and leave them in a state of agony. When you are fighting for survival, sometimes you have no other choice but to drain that person bff6bb2d33

Pantene, Sears Make Breast Health Pledge Pantene and Sears have developed a new campaign called “A Voice for Breast Health,” which will offer additional resources to help breast-feeding mothers cope with difficult circumstances. The initiative includes supporting mothers through the challenges of providing breast milk, talking about their needs, providing a quiet place to nurse, and educating the community. “We’ve always been focused on delivering products that help women look and feel their best, and this campaign extends that mission to help them in ways that help their lives,” said Dan Goldeen, Chairman and CEO of Pantene Pro-V, parent company of Pantene Products, Inc. “We are thrilled that Sears is helping us in this effort.” The campaign is part of Sears Holdings Corp.’s Breast Health Program, which provides more than 1,100 products and services for women’s breast health needs. “We are proud to be working with a partner like Pantene that brings a wealth of knowledge and experience in helping and supporting women through all stages of their lives,” said Gary Anderson, CEO and president of Sears Holdings. “As more mothers become active participants in the care and feeding of their newborns, it’s time to support and empower them with resources like these,” said Susan F. Thorne, President of Pantene Pro-V. The website for the new initiative, pantenevoice.com, launched Feb. 17. Additional resources will be featured at that time.
